Connect with Fellow Educators and Make a Difference for your Students!

Every year, WIDA recruits educators with culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds to review ACCESS for ELLs and verify that content is grade-level appropriate, ensure items don't unfairly favor any group of test-takers, and confirm materials are error-free. Help us make this assessment the best it can be for you, your fellow educators, and—most importantly—your ELL students.

Selected educators join WIDA staff in online review sessions, or in person (expenses paid), to review test items. Alternatively, you may be asked to participate in field testing or other assessment administration opportunities with your students. In all cases, WIDA provides all the training and resources you need.

To let us know you're interested in future events, complete this short survey: go.wisc.edu/9v9339. Your answers help us ensure every group of reviewers includes people with a diverse set of skills and backgrounds.

Based on your answers, we might contact you about the events below or other opportunities to provide input and help us further develop WIDA assessments. We're recruiting now for review sessions in November, so complete the survey soon to be considered for all of this year's events!

- Bias and Sensitivity Review
Ensure test items do not favor any group of students over another or have the potential to upset test-takers.
- Content Review
Ensure each test item is factual and grade-level appropriate.
- Forms Review
Review the entire test immediately before it is operational to do a final check for errors.
- Field Testing
Let your students practice for the scored test and ensure new test items meet our high quality standards.

Additional details, including event dates, will be provided as potential participants are selected. Events occur throughout the year, so please complete the survey even if your availability is limited!
